

MEET YOUR BEST GLOBAL FRIEND!

The Internet has quickly become the international job seeker's best friend. Jobs and employers who were once difficult to locate can now be found with just the click of a mouse. Using search engines, directories, gateway websites, job boards, and email, job seekers can now explore every corner of the globe for exciting job and career opportunities. They can research countries and employers, network with expats, browse job listings, upload resumes into databases, and apply for jobs online. Never has such a seemingly chaotic and inaccessible job market become so comprehensible and user-friendly, at least not until the publication of this revealing directory.

Welcome to the new cyber jungle of international employment websites. Faced with a daunting task of sorting through thousands of websites relevant to international employment, savvy job seekers need assistance in determining the best sites to use for finding a job. Written by two leading career and travel experts, The Directory of Websites for International Jobs is a treasure-trove of sound advice on how to use the Internet for conducting an international job search. Identifying more than 1,400 websites for launching a global job search, the authors quickly cut through the Internet clutter as they zero in on the most important online employment resources:

- Search engines, directories, and gateway websites
- International executive recruiters
- Global gateway employment sites
- Expat communities for networking
- Region- and country-specific employment websites
- Employment and travel publishers
- Nonprofit and educational organizations
- Government and international agencies
- Contracting and consulting firms
- Teaching opportunities abroad
- Websites for implementing a seven-step job search process

Whether you are planning to live and work in the United Kingdom, Italy, Russia, South Africa, India, Vietnam, China, Australia, or Brazil, don't start your job search without first examining the many resources outlined in this directory. Regardless of your age or international experience, The Directory of Websites for International Jobs will certainly open a whole new world of employment opportunities. It may well be your most important passport to your dream job. Don't leave home without it!
